THE desirability of the adoption by the Chinese of the Western system of medicine. and more especially surgery, has often been urged in these columns. No innovation of Western origin could be more productive of good, and it is remarkable that so little progress has been made in this direction, considering the number of hospitals established by the Medical Missions in China, to which the na-The MAPS and PLANS have been mostly tives gladly resort for advice and assistance. The natural conservatism of the race, the power of custom, the objection of the people to amputation, and the fact that the doctors in China have neither status nor influence, whereupon a number of scholars and unemployed and are indifferently remunerated, are probably the reasons why Chinese youth who have received a foreign education show no endangered. Tso replied in a consolatory strain, inclination to study for the medical profession in Europe. The late Dr. Wowg, of Canton, who took his degree in Edinburgh. was, we believe, the only Chinaman who over practised the healing art on the Western system. Dr. Ho Kar has studied medicine, and taken degrees, but he prefers the law as a profession. It is to be regretted that some of the sons of the Chinese gentry do not turn heir attention to medicine, but there seems little likelihood of their doing so until the Authorities lead the way. The hostilities with France-may perhaps serve to force on their attention the need existing for an army medical corps, and the inability of native doctors to properly dress the wounds or set the limbs of the soldier. If the Imperial Government see fit to send a number. young men to Europe to study medicine and a shorter range. The length is less than that of surgery there is no doubt. There are also ten medical journals published in Japanese, which help to spread a knowledge of medical science throughout the country. But the native doctors are not content with the progress made; they are auxious to encourage study of the foreign languages in which medical works are chiefly written, especially the Anglo-Saxon. "Western medicine," says a writer in the supplement above alluded to, "is making rapid progress in Japan, and the practice of Chinese medicine will undoubtedly be in a few years a thing of the past. It may be contact with the English Co-increased Thus the Japanese contact with the English Co-increased Thus the Language contact with the English Co-increased Thus the English Cowas not by any means to be despised. Therefore, prince when he landed at Bombay in 1875. should the present Korean trouble come to a settlement in the same way as that of 1882, the result will doubtless be a loss to Japan, and a gain. to China. Our people cannot contemplate such a possibility with anything like composure and we trust that the Government will observe the atmost firmness and equity in the approaching negotiations with China and will be careful not to make the least concession to her.

The present trouble is no ordinary matter. Three independent powers, Japan, China, and Korea, are involved in it, the first being the inhands she has sustained injury. Peace might be prove a great moral lesson to you. Good-day. Hongkong and Shanghai Bank Shares—127 speedily restored if China and Korsa were to him first door to the right as you go down the submit to our protest and offer satisfactory apologies; but if the Chinese, obstinate and supersillions as they are, hesitate to atone for their faults, and fail to give sufficient astisfaction to the injured party. Japan will certainly not yield to their insults without some practical attempts at vindicating her rights. In that event the Japanese should suspend all debate on the subject, and appeal to the arbitrament of arms. No greater misfortune could happen to the people of both countries, but we cannot under any circumstance pass over a national diagrace.

Should Japan declare war against China and Korea, the latter would of course be unworthy of fighting. China being our principal enemy, to whose overthrow we should direct our main efforts. We should send a detachment to Korea. to deal with the Chinese troops in Korea and bring the Kor a Government to our legitimate terms, and at to same time, wel'should march upon Peking. Should the Emperor retire to the interior, we would follow him there, and ultimately China would have to ask for quarter. But China is still a great Empire in the Orient. However brave the Japanese soldiers may be, much blood and treasure would be spent before the submission of the Middle Kingdom could be accomplished. Even the French seem to have been worn out by the resistance they have met. One may naturally ask whether the Japanese are really prepared to accomplish such a great achievement. We have only to reply that there cannot be the slightest doubt as to their success. and we shall now proceed to explain our reasons for such a belief. The public are well aware of the corrupt conthough the Eight Banners, Black Flags, course well enough in their way, but the man and then his 4,000 auditors went home "mighty who use them are little better than dummies. In Patron Character and tried to course the hands To attack China with our tand and marine forces would be like smashing an earthen vessel with an iron bar. We have a standing army of much. You say that you want $20 this morning forty thousand men, and the militia and for pin money, and it was only yesterday that I for pin money, and it was only yesterday that I reserves reach one hundred and ten thousand. Should this be insufficient, we can fall back on the shizoku, woo, if raised in the proportion of one man from each family, will form a legion of four hundred thousand. Fortunately we can still avail ourselves of the benefits of the feudal régime. There are numberless samurai of between twenty-five and thirty years of age, who are sufficiently endowed with the skill and spirit of a by-gone time, and who, suffering at present from inaction, would willingly fight for their country in any emergency. If war were declared with China, there would be no difficulty in raising a standing army and shizoku volunteers five hundred thousand strong. Let Japanese samurai armed with Japanese swords be thrown upon Chinese camps, and the result of the conflict would not be difficult the north side of Dartmoor by the throwing over to predict. We cannot by any means persuade ourselves to commend the French proceedings against China. With twenty thousand troops landed in Tonquin, they could not cross the Yunnan frontier, being stracked only by a floor of banditti commanded by Liu Jung-fu; threatened riot was averted by wise counsels, with a dozen men-of-war in Taiwan, they have done nothing save the capture of Kee-lung. In Tamsui they were thrice repulsed. Nothing could hostile step had been an offer from the Prince of bea greater disgrace to the French Navy. But if we win, not only will our reputation be increased in the Orient, but we will be respected by even distant European and American powers. The abolition of extra-territoriality will no longer be a question, and our country will be looked up to as the powerful civilized nation of the East. The supply of war funds can be obtained with equal ease. Knowing that the result would be either rain or prosperity, our people will willingly curtail expenses as much as possible, exercise coonomy, and work hard. Having had the honour of being born in Japan, our only hope is to see that its independence is an established fact. Satisfied in this hope we would willingly fight to the death in Peking. The sacrifice of our life and property is not worth considering if it be for the accomplishment of this end. This sentiment, we believe, is echoed over the whole of Japan. If, therefore, the trouble between Japan and China should result in war, we are assured of the certain success of our country.

When, in about the year 1869, the elder believe that Mr. Gladstone is coming to terms Roberts gradually obtained what was at that with your lordship over the Redistribution time considered such perfect mastery over Bill upon the condition that he should sign the spot-stroke that a break of 800 was cre- the death-warrant of his career. dited to him by means of the all-powerful hazard, and subsequently W. Cook still further improved upon his performance, it was generally conceded that the game would suffer were billiards gradually to degenerate into a series of winning bazards at the top of the table, to the exclusion of all the other varied and innumerable strokes once so intimately associated with the board of the green cloth. In order to prevent this deterioration of the play, the championship table was designed, and the first match under these special conditions took place in February, 1870, the pockets being of smaller dimensions than on the ordinary table, and the spot moved nearer the top cushion. This certainly had the desired effect as regards the winning red hazard, but the table was universally uspopared to GRANT POLICIES on MARINE pular, both with the professionals themselves RISKS to all parts of the World, at current and the public, and, in fact, was nover used except when the championship matches were decided. It was, therefore, only natural that all our leading cueists found it more profitable to devote all their time and practice to the more popular spot hazard, the large breaks obtainable by its means never failing to attract notice and attention as compared to smaller, if more scientific compilations by the exponents of the all-round game. The climax, however, was reached when breaks of 1,000 and upwards began to be achieved by means of the spot, and these performances were credited to men certainly not up to championship form, and after 1,989 by Peall, last May at Cambridge, the most ardent devotees of the spot hazard began to discover that some alteration was needed to prevent the utter extinction of scientific billiards as opposed to a mechanical exactness is one particular stroke.
